Ode to the West Wind

I

O Wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead
Are driven, like shorts from an enchanter bēt bleeing,

Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
Pestilence-stricken multitudes: O thou,
Who Mariolest to their dark wintery bed

The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
Each like a corpse within its grave, until Thine azure sister of the Spring shall blow

Her clarion o'er the dreaming earth, and fill (Driving sweet buds like blocks to bed in air)
With living lines and colours plain and hill;

Wild Spirit which art moving everywhere;
Destroyer and Preserver; hear, oh, hear!

I I

Thou, on whose streams, mid the steeps sky's commotion,
Loose clouds like earth's decaying leaves, are shed,
Shook from the tangled boughs of Heaven and Ocean,

Angels of rain and lightning: ~~They~~ they are spread
On the blue surface of thine airy surge,
Like the bright hair uplifted from the head

Of some fierce ~~Atte~~ Maenad, even from the dim verge
Of the horizon to the zenith's height,
The rocks of the approaching storm. Thou dirge

Of the dying year, to which this closing night
Will be the same of a vast sepulture,
Vaulted with all thy congregated might

Of vapours, from whose solid atmosphere
Black rain, and fire, and hail ~~will burst~~ will burst: oh, hear!

I I I

Thou, who didst waken from his summer dreams the blue Mediterranean, where he lay,
Lull'd by the coil of his crystalline streams,

Beside a pumice isle in Baiae's bay,
And saw in sleep old palaces and towers
Quivering within the ~~wave~~ wave's intenser day,

All overgrown with azme moss and flowers
So sweet, the sense faints picturing them! thou
For whose path the Atlantic's level powers

Cleave themselves into chasing, while far below the sea-blooms and the ozy woods which wear
The ~~sapless~~ sapless foliage of the ocean, know

Thy voice, and suddenly sport gray with fear,
And tremble and despoil themselves : oh, near!

I V

If I were a dead leaf thou mightest bear;
If I were a swift cloud to fly with thee;
A wave to pant beneath thy power, and share

The impulse of thy strength, only less free
Than thou, O uncontrollable! If even I were as in my boyhood, and could be

The comrade of thy wanderings over Heaven,
As then, when to outstrip thy skyey speed
Scarce seemed a vision, I ~~would~~ ne'er have striven

As this with thee in prayer in my sore need.
O, lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud!
I fall upon the thorny of life! ~~blood~~ I bleed!

A heavy weight of hours has chained and bowed
One too like thee: formless, and swift, and proud.

V

Make me thy bane, even as the honest is:
What if my leaves are falling like its own?
The tumult of thy mighty harmonies

Will take from both a deep, antimonial tone,
Sweet though in sadness. Be thou, Spirit here,
My Spirit! Be thou me, impetuous one!

Drive my dead thoughts over the universe
Like withered leaves to quicken a new birth!
And, by the incantation of this verse,

Scatter, as from an ~~withering~~ <sup>unextinguished</sup> health
Ashes and snarks, my words ~~s~~ among mankind!
Be ~~taught~~ through my lips to unawakened earth

The trumpet of a prophecy! O Wind
If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?
